Historical Notes

Borgarvirki is believed to be a substantial fortification dating from the early years of the settlement of the region. According to old Icelandic tales, the fortification was built by the Vikings around 1000 AD. The fortification was built on a rocky outcrop and was surrounded by a stone wall. The wall was built with large stones and was about 100 meters long. The wall was built in a way that it was difficult to climb. The wall was built in a way that it was difficult to climb.
